Procedure

Lead-in: Ridiculous legislation

1. Say something outrageous like 'Hunting camels is forbidden by law in Arizona'.
2. Get students to sit in 3s and discuss the statement they've just heard.
3. Put sentence on the board for reference.
4. Teacher monitors and makes note of turn-taking expressions used by students and puts them up on the board

Preparation

1. Get students to focus on the language produced during the activity.
2. Prepare the students by writing the language functions on the board, and then provide them with the first example. Ask students to decide which function matches the expression.
3. Quickly feed back ideas from the class (there is no right or wrong answer at this stage).
4. In pairs, students match the expressions on the handout to the language functions.

Activity

1. Divide students into groups of four or five depending on the number of students and give each group a set of conversation trigger cards (to be kept face down).
2. Explain that students should decide who starts and that this person picks up a card, reads it out to the group and starts with his/her views on the subject. The other group members come in and contribute to the discussion as they wish.
3. Stop the conversations after 2 minutes. The next student on the left picks up a card and a new topic is discussed, until every student has had at least one turn.
4. Monitor the discussion and encourage students to express and expand their ideas and opinions using the turn-taking strategies presented in the preparation stage.

Language functions

Match the expressions to the language functions. See the example below.

I know it's rude to interrupt, but...

I've nearly finished.

Don't you think (so)?

(Just) one more thing (before you interrupt).

I wouldn't usually interrupt, but...

But that's enough from me.

And that's not all...

You know more about this than me, so...

Would this be a good time to...?

Please go ahead.

Before you have your say...

As I was saying...

I'd like to hear your opinion before I comment.

Would you agree (that...)?

Getting back on track...

And what's more...

We seem to be getting off the point.
